Larry W. Caudle, Jr. practices in the areas of construction law and government contracts with an emphasis in heavy civil/highway and transportation as well as federal contracting. He works with owners, contractors, subcontractors, and engineers in claim preparation and analysis, real-time advice during construction, claims avoidance, alternative dispute resolution, and litigation.

He has participated as legal counsel on several design-build and public-private venture proposals and has handled subsequent contract negotiations on such projects throughout the country.

Larry gained significant hands-on experience in heavy construction before attending law school. He grew up in a family-owned general contracting company and after receiving his undergraduate degree, worked as an estimator and project manager in the heavy construction industry for eight years.

Larry has handled construction and government contract matters including:

- Representing an ENR Top 10 civil contractor in a $21.5 million claim against the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on a design-build Army housing project in the Southeast U.S.;
- Representing a general contractor in claims and disputes in connection with the rehabilitation and modernization of a wastewater treatment plant serving a population of over 22,000 in Western Virginia;
- Representing an ENR Top 10 civil contractor in the construction of a $90 million hydro-electric power generation plant and related claims by and against a public utility in the Southwestern U.S.;
- Representing an ENR Top 5 civil contractor in a $40 million claim on a light rail project in Phoenix, Arizona;
- Serving as special counsel to a state attorney general's office involving construction of a community college fine arts facility;
- Representing an international contractor in a $50 million dispute involving an off-shore natural gas drilling platform and sub-sea pipeline project in the North Atlantic;
- Representing an ENR Top 10 Building Contractor in a $20 million litigation involving the failure of a green roof system on a U.S. Library of Congress facility;
